

Charley Macedo Quoted in IPWatchdog's™s What to Watch in 2021: Predictions and Thoughts for the New Year

IPWatchdog

Charley Macedo provided commentary to IPWatchdog's What to Watch in 2021: IP Stakeholders Offer Predictions and Thoughts for the New Year feature story. This annual article features leaders in the intellectual property field providing their predictions and thoughts for the New Year.

Charley noted, "With a new administration and a changing Congress, we can expect to see a reshuffling of IP policies at the USPTO, Congress and the White House. It is still unclear whether this reshuffling will result in a return to the Obama era anti-patent policies, an enhancement of the lincu-era desire to enhance patent owner rights, or something in between. Either way, we will likely continue to see ongoing confusion on patent-eligibility issues at the Federal Circuit without any supervision by the Supreme Court, and more rules being developed by the Patent Office to implement policy."

Read the full article.